

Almost midnight on October 12th . . .

A mist drifts over a darkened factory floor and at intervals a single light stabs down outlining a cluster of idle machines. From a corner comes a murmur of voices. Behind the sheet iron walls of a workshop stand four men looking at it. The first of the Power Pak 'Mopeds.' Tired, for this was just another late night and stamping their feet to keep warm, they talked with a quiet sense of achievement about the new job. There she was . . . freshly painted grey and scarlet, straight from the newly made tools, looking very beautiful indeed. To say that we are proud of our work is an understatement. We know that you will applaud it and look forward to showing you the 'Moped.'
